

Happy Birthday, Jahnavi ❤️

I still remember the first day we met in college—you were new to the city, and we discovered we stayed along the same train route. I confidently asked you to follow me home... only for us to end up on the wrong train. What could've been stressful turned into our very first little adventure, figuring out how to get back on the right route and laughing through the confusion.

From that day on, you've been a constant source of comfort and support for me. Even though we don't get to meet as often as we'd like, distance and time have never really mattered—you've always been there, and we've always managed to stay connected. I'm so grateful for you, for your kindness, and for the warmth you bring into my life. Wishing you a birthday filled with love, laughter, and many more adventures—on the right train or the wrong one. You deserve all the happiness today and always.